

Boston Store

THE WEATHER TUESDAY—
Fair tonight! Tuesday fair, and cooler.

New Fall Dress Goods

Considerable interest is centered on the new productions for fall wear. We have scoured the markets to get the very latest, and now place before you everything in the new fall dress goods "dame fashion" shows for the coming season.

At $1.00 a Yard, Candelabra Cloth. Somewhat on the serge weave order but with a smooth surface. It comes in a big variety of colorings. Light and dark red, modes and tans, browns and a beautiful shade of black. This cloth is very durable.

At $1.25, Cheviots. For suits and skirts a very desirable cloth is Cheviot, strictly all wool in all the latest shades, including black.

At $1.00. Foulard Serges, a new cloth entirely. Made of fine selected wool in all colors, including black. We find the weight of this material very desirable for suits and skirts.

At $1.00 and $1.25. Unfinished worsteds, a regular suit-making, durable and lasting for hard wear. It comes in all colors, also black.

At 29c a Yard. Pounella Stripes. The price is cheap but the goods are extremely big values, especially for children wear. Dark and light reds, green, brown, tan, and navy blue.

At 25c a Yard. Tricot Flannels. The best and cheapest material to be had for shirt waists. The colorings are immense and the variety exceedingly large.

At $2.00 a Yard. Double-faced Skirting, real home-spun, 60 inches wide. The best material for walking skirts in the country.

At 29c a Yard. One lot of Fancy Novelty Dress Goods, in full width, for every day wear or children's use. They are well worth your attention. The original prices on these goods ranged from 50c to $1.

At 55c a Yard. One lot of Novelty Dress Goods; all wool and silk and wool effects, good dark colorings. The original prices on these goods were 75c to $1.50.

At 50c a Yard. Taffeta Silks, the very latest of shades. This is a splendid lining, silk being free from filling.

At 72c a Yard. Our popular Taffeta Silk, all colors. We sell a large quantity of these goods, as they generally sell for 85c a yard.

See the Walking Skirt, we sell for $5.00, in tan, dark and medium Oxford greys.

150-152 S. HOWARD ST.

Come in Today or Any Other Day But Come Sure....

And see our complete line of ready-to-wear hats and you will not buy elsewhere.

Formal Opening Later.

New York Millinery Store

129 South Howard st.

Of the many good things in men's shoes we offer this week is the

Cordovan Shoe at... $3.50

Whoever wants a good fit, a stylish fit will find it in the CORDOVAN SHOE.

SHUMAKER & CO.

117 S. Howard St.

A. J. Friess

DEALER IN

Imported & Domestic Wines

411 SOUTH MAIN ST., AKRON, O.

Recommended by physicians for medical and table use.

AKRON PAYS HER FINAL TRIBUTE

(Continued from third page.)

heights of time, the masterpiece of a master hand.

"He was the soul of honor. At the Republican National Convention of 1888 in Chicago, when it became apparent that John Sherman could not be nominated, and one delegation after another tendered its support to William McKinley, he even insisted he should accept the nomination for the Presidency, he addressed the convention as follows:

"Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Convention: I am here as one of the chosen representatives of my state. I am here by resolution of the Republican State Convention, passed without a single dissenting voice, commanding me to cast my vote for John Sherman for President, and to use every worthy endeavor for his nomination. I accepted the trust because my heart and judgment were in accord with the letter and spirit and purpose of that resolution. It has pleased certain delegates to cast their votes for me for President. I am not insensible to the honor they would do me, but in the presence of the duty resting upon me I cannot remain silent with honor. I cannot, consistently with the wish of the state whose credentials I bear, and which has trusted me; I cannot with honorable fidelity to John Sherman, who has trusted me in his cause and with confidence; I cannot, consistently with my own views of personal integrity, consent, or seem to consent, to permit my name to be used as a candidate before this convention. I would not respect myself if I could find it in my heart to do so, or permit that to be done which could be ground for anyone to suspect that I wavered in my loyalty to Ohio, or my devotion to the chief of her choice and the chief of mine. I do not request—I demand, that no delegate who would not cast reflection upon me shall cast a ballot for me."

"President McKinley, the public servant, was quick to perceive the will of the people, and to accede to it. The deep sense of obligation and responsibility with which he entered upon a public trust, was strongly evidenced when on March 1st, 1897, just before leaving Canton to take the Presidential chair, he addressed his fellow citizens in these words, which now seem to have been freighted with prophetic significance:

"My Neighbors and Friends and Fellow Citizens:—On the eve of departure to the seat of government, soon to assume the duties of an arduous responsibility, as great as can devolve upon any man, nothing could give me greater pleasure than this farewell greeting—this evidence of your friendship and your sympathy, your good-will, and, I am sure, the prayers of all the people with whom I have lived so long, and whose confidence and esteem are dearer to me than any other earthly honors. To all of us the future is a sealed book; but if I can, by official act or administration or utterance, in any degree add to the prosperity and unity of our beloved country, and the advancement and well-being of our splendid citizenship, I will devote the best and most unselfish efforts of my life to that end."

"The assumption of the chief magistracy is of such grave importance that partisanship cannot blind the judgment or accept any other consideration than the public good of all, of every party and every section. With this thought uppermost in my mind, I reluctantly take leave of my friends and neighbors, cherishing in my heart the sweetest memories and the tenderest thoughts of my old home—my home now, and I trust, my home hereafter, so long as I live. I thank you and bid you all good-bye."

"Few Presidents were so well equipped from the very start, and the wide range of subjects treated in his public addresses, seldom equaled by any public speaker, attests unmistakably his fitness to cope with every phase of governmental policy. Never did he speak an unwise word, or announce an unsound doctrine. He was thoroughly conversant with the duties of his office. His administration saw the downfall of the oppressor, the expansion of trade and the return of national prosperity. Under his beneficent influence, the bitterness of party strife ended, all sectional lines disappeared, and there came to our beloved country such an era of good feeling as it had never known."

"President McKinley, the statesman, will be counted with the illustrious of earth. His was an unconquerable steadfastness of purpose, coupled with almost unlimited physical and mental powers of endurance. The impulsion of his noble life will incite his successors to emulate his worthy example in the conscientious performance of duty. The tendencies of the man, and the high plane of his statesmanship, were most clearly indicated in his Buffalo speech, when he said: 'Let us ever remember that our interest is in accord, not conflict, and that our real enemies rest on the victories of peace, not those of war.'

"No better evidence of the good judgment and intentions of President Roosevelt could be asked, than the solemn announcement of his determination to continue absolutely unbroken the policy of President McKinley for the peace, prosperity and honor of the country. In that resolve our new President must have the equally solemn support of every patriotic citizen, and may the God of his predecessors, be his God, standing with him at the helm, while he guides in her onward course our glorious Ship of State. "You are familiar with the tragedy which closed President McKinley's life. I will not dwell upon it. When he was stricken down, the people watched and prayed through saddened days for his recovery. At last the end came; his mighty heart ceased to beat; he went hence in the fullness of his greatness; a nation in tears; the civilized world mourns. He has left us the example of his life, a precious heritage,—it belongs to all the world. Enduring fame will crown his memory. He walks with the immortals.

"Hall, McKinley! Exalted member of a deathless triumvirate, with Lincoln and Garfield, you shall live forever in the hearts and lives of your countrymen. None more grandly lived. None more grandly passed beyond.

"For what you are and have been to us, for what you accomplished while with us, for the countless fire-sides where hope and contentment have succeeded poverty and despair,—we honor you today,—and forever.

"Wrapped in the flag of your country as a fitting mantle, you have lain down to pleasant dreams. We would not disturb you, but bid you sleep on in well-earned repose, as you would bid us to turn from weeping, and spurred by your holy example, with nobler and higher purposes take up again the duties and responsibilities of life.

"The best messages which come to us in this sad hour are those of our martyred presidents:

"With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in. (Lincoln.)

"God reigns and the government at Washington still lives. (Garfield.)

"It is God's way. His Will, not ours, be done." (McKinley.)

After the singing of "Memorial Song" by the chorus of school children, Judge C. R. Grant, appointed to prepare resolutions, was introduced. He prefaced the reading of the resolutions with some excellent remarks upon the character of President McKinley and the lesson which might be taken from the tragedy which resulted in his death. The resolutions were adopted unanimously and with applause. They follow:

RESOLUTIONS BY JUDGE GRANT.

"We, the people of Summit county, O., assembled at this memorial time, deeply sensible of the loss sustained by us, our country and the world, through the death of Wm. McKinley, late President of the United States of America, formerly our representative in Congress, and long our neighbor, and according to the debt and duty we owe to ourselves, to mankind, and to posterity to keep in grateful remembrance his life and service, and desiring now to testify our sorrow for his untimely end,

"Resolved, That in him was exemplified the blameless domestic life, the loyal friend, the genial companion, the chivalrous soldier, the patriotic citizen, the Christian gentleman, the sagacious politician, the honorable party adversary, the cautious statesman, the incorruptible chief magistrate and the upright man.

"That we are confident of the large and enduring place his name will fill in the annals of our time, and that the impartial verdict of history rendered upon his record, will not fail to challenge the attention and win the commendation of generations yet to be, until the qualities of civic righteousness, official rectitude and personal virtue shall cease to appeal to the human heart.

"That we abhor the manner of his taking off as alien to every instinct of the American people, and we expect that when the guilt of the criminal shall have been judicially ascertained, by constitutional means and through the orderly and dignified methods of legal procedure, such punishment shall be measured to him as shall satisfy the offended majesty of the law.

"That we extend to his stricken widow our heartfelt sympathy in her bereavement, and we earnestly and prayerfully commend her to the tender care of Him who comforts the afflicted, cheers the mourner and binds up the wounds of the broken-hearted.

"That we ask each citizen to improve this occasion by renewed vows of fidelity to our country's welfare, and to the fit performance of patriotic duty, as we shall be given to see that duty—confident that this we can best commemorate the life of our late President and our always friend."

FIVE-MINUTE ADDRESSES.

After adopting resolutions a number of five-minute addresses were delivered, the first by

HON. GEO. W. CROUSE.

He said: "Wm. McKinley, the President of the United States, the scholar, the neighbor, the friend is dead, and the nation mourns. His character was spotless, and he had the confidence of the entire people. Among the galaxy of statesmen, his rank was high. He always stood for some fixed purpose, and his devotion to principle was grand. It is hard for us to think that his genial face, his kindly smile and extended hand are gone from us forever, and that hereafter he will be to us only a memory. But his works will live on, with their wonderful lessons and examples of devotion to duty and country. Let us as loyal citizens take up his work where he left off, and go on and on trying to achieve greater."

HON. N. D. TIBBALS.

"If the question were to be submitted today to the 70,000,000 of hearts and bowed heads why a man so pure, so honored by family, so loved by his country, should be stricken down to death, no one with an earthly knowledge could answer. We can only in the language of him when he was stricken down say 'Thy will be done.' The assassin aimed to sow the seeds of anarchy that a greater crop of treason should grow up. He had no thoughts of the modest citizen and honored ruler; his aim was at the government—to tear it down. But, my friends, he failed in his purpose. What shall the harvest be? Shall it be a new life to this destroying element? No, no, no; instead it will call us closer to our duty as patriotic citizens, and develop within us a higher love of private life, and make us better and nobler than ever. Let that be the outcome of this great disaster; let it cause us to love our country with more devotion, and our neighbor as ourselves. These will be the results of Wm. McKinley's sacrifice; they will teach our children to love government, and dislike those who plot against it. When time goes on we will look back and see this powerful lesson and be better of it. God be praised for a Lincoln to save our country, and God be praised for a McKinley to preserve it."

After the playing of Chopin's Funeral March, by the united bands,

S. G. ROGERS

Was introduced. He said: "As one cherishing a political faith different from that of our martyred President, I accept with a grateful heart this opportunity to pay a humble tribute to his memory. All that is mortal of him, late the ruler of the greatest nation on earth, now lies cold in the tomb, stricken down in the zenith of his power by an assassin. Every heart in this nation has been melted into silence by the terrible affliction. When we laid him to rest amid banks of flowers and the tears of a wounded nation, even the tongue of industry was silenced for a time, the shrieking locomotive was still in its path, and even the faint click of the telegraph instruments was hushed—never was such reverence paid to mortal man. It seems as if all the good deeds he has done have blossomed into speech to pay tribute to his memory. At first, after receiving the wounds which caused his death, it seemed as if he might reach recovery, but he lingered on the sea between life and death like a ship-tossed mariner, with each receding wave carrying him farther toward the other shore. Wm. McKinley was one of the greatest sons of this nation. As a citizen he was conscientious and upright; as a husband, most loving and devoted. Moved by the sad lesson taught by the death of our President, let us emulate his traits with more love for our fellow man, with more friendship, more sunshine, more humanity."

JUDGE U. L. MARVIN.

"There is a tear for all that die; there are tears over the humblest grave, but the tears of a nation have swollen to a flood over the tomb of him who has just been laid to rest. All over the world, wherever men have addressed assemblages, words of commendation have been spoken of the great life of our deceased President; no words spoken have expressed more than the truth. We may take lessons from his life, and there are also lessons in his death. There are good men and good women who have said the assassin who caused the death of Wm. McKinley should be lynched. But this is wrong. It comes from the same spirit which induced the assassin to do what he did. Only by emulating the best principles of citizenship in our own lives can we teach others a respect and love for government. Let us resolve that only that liberty which is upheld by law is the liberty for the American people."

"The American Flag 'Song' was here sung by the school children. It followed Judge Marvin's remarks very appropriately.

EX-MAYOR W. E. YOUNG.

"What meaneth this vast assemblage of Akron's citizens in 'God's first temple,' on His holy Sabbath day? Why have you left your homes, your groups of friends, your favorite books, or your ordinary pleasures? Can it be that you have been attracted hither merely to enjoy the beauty of this lovely park, merely through a morbid curiosity to see the crowds, or to hear the eloquence of orators? No, no; you have been drawn here by a loftier and nobler desire. You have come to pay tribute to the memory of a great and good man, and to register your remembrance against the inhuman wretch who has brought shame upon our nation, and to repudiate that class in society to whose teachings the assassin attributes his deed; you are to endorse sentiments crying out that anarchy be erased from our land. What tribute can I lay upon the bier of the honored one who has been called from us? What message of comfort can I give to the aching hearts? We may pass by his attainments as a lawyer, for there are others at the bar greater than he has been, and scholars more profound, but we honor his simplicity and devotion, both in public and private life. He was the most popular man that ever occupied the Presidential chair, because he loved the common people, because he wiped out the last trace of sectionalism between the North and South, and in his death breathed into the brotherhood of man a new life. So long as honor and devotion to country is loved, so long will the memory of Wm. McKinley live in the hearts of the people."

PROF. S. P. ORTH.

"We share today in a world of sorrow. Never since the birth of our Republic has sorrow been so universal and deep in this land, and there is no eulogy of Wm. McKinley more eloquent than your tears. But let us remember that though our President is dead he still lives—not as in ordinary life, but in the works he has left behind. The Republic lives in the hearts of a free-born people; the spirit of liberty that gives life to the nation, and patriotism and faith in duty for all, and nature has given us talents. All men are allowed under our flag to develop these talents as he will. Wm. McKinley was the product of these conditions. He knew in the fullest sense the love of country and the love of his fellow man, and he practiced both; an altruism divine was his. As he was drawn nearer to the brotherhood of man he was drawn nearer to his God, and his devotion to Christian duty was unflinching. His words of faith in the Supreme Ruler when he was passing into the

After the playing of Chopin's Funeral March, by the united bands, S. G. ROGERS

Was introduced. He said: "As one cherishing a political faith different from that of our martyred President, I accept with a grateful heart this opportunity to pay a humble tribute to his memory. All that is mortal of him, late the ruler of the greatest nation on earth, now lies cold in the tomb, stricken down in the zenith of his power by an assassin. Every heart in this nation has been melted into silence by the terrible affliction. When we laid him to rest amid banks of flowers and the tears of a wounded nation, even the tongue of industry was silenced for a time, the shrieking locomotive was still in its path, and even the faint click of the telegraph instruments was hushed—never was such reverence paid to mortal man. It seems as if all the good deeds he has done have blossomed into speech to pay tribute to his memory. At first, after receiving the wounds which caused his death, it seemed as if he might reach recovery, but he lingered on the sea between life and death like a ship-tossed mariner, with each receding wave carrying him farther toward the other shore. Wm. McKinley was one of the greatest sons of this nation. As a citizen he was conscientious and upright; as a husband, most loving and devoted. Moved by the sad lesson taught by the death of our President, let us emulate his traits with more love for our fellow man, with more friendship, more sunshine, more humanity."

JUDGE U. L. MARVIN.

"There is a tear for all that die; there are tears over the humblest grave, but the tears of a nation have swollen to a flood over the tomb of him who has just been laid to rest. All over the world, wherever men have addressed assemblages, words of commendation have been spoken of the great life of our deceased President; no words spoken have expressed more than the truth. We may take lessons from his life, and there are also lessons in his death. There are good men and good women who have said the assassin who caused the death of Wm. McKinley should be lynched. But this is wrong. It comes from the same spirit which induced the assassin to do what he did. Only by emulating the best principles of citizenship in our own lives can we teach others a respect and love for government. Let us resolve that only that liberty which is upheld by law is the liberty for the American people."

EX-MAYOR W. E. YOUNG.

"What meaneth this vast assemblage of Akron's citizens in 'God's first temple,' on His holy Sabbath day? Why have you left your homes, your groups of friends, your favorite books, or your ordinary pleasures? Can it be that you have been attracted hither merely to enjoy the beauty of this lovely park, merely through a morbid curiosity to see the crowds, or to hear the eloquence of orators? No, no; you have been drawn here by a loftier and nobler desire. You have come to pay tribute to the memory of a great and good man, and to register your remembrance against the inhuman wretch who has brought shame upon our nation, and to repudiate that class in society to whose teachings the assassin attributes his deed; you are to endorse sentiments crying out that anarchy be erased from our land. What tribute can I lay upon the bier of the honored one who has been called from us? What message of comfort can I give to the aching hearts? We may pass by his attainments as a lawyer, for there are others at the bar greater than he has been, and scholars more profound, but we honor his simplicity and devotion, both in public and private life. He was the most popular man that ever occupied the Presidential chair, because he loved the common people, because he wiped out the last trace of sectionalism between the North and South, and in his death breathed into the brotherhood of man a new life. So long as honor and devotion to country is loved, so long will the memory of Wm. McKinley live in the hearts of the people."

PROF. S. P. ORTH.

"We share today in a world of sorrow. Never since the birth of our Republic has sorrow been so universal and deep in this land, and there is no eulogy of Wm. McKinley more eloquent than your tears. But let us remember that though our President is dead he still lives—not as in ordinary life, but in the works he has left behind. The Republic lives in the hearts of a free-born people; the spirit of liberty that gives life to the nation, and patriotism and faith in duty for all, and nature has given us talents. All men are allowed under our flag to develop these talents as he will. Wm. McKinley was the product of these conditions. He knew in the fullest sense the love of country and the love of his fellow man, and he practiced both; an altruism divine was his. As he was drawn nearer to the brotherhood of man he was drawn nearer to his God, and his devotion to Christian duty was unflinching. His words of faith in the Supreme Ruler when he was passing into the

"Strong to the end, a man of men, 'From out the strife he passed—' 'The grandest hour of all his life 'Was that of earth the last.'"

L. S. EBBRIGHT.

In speaking of President McKinley, Postmaster L. S. Ebbright, who was a member of his staff while he was Governor of Ohio, said: "I would be untrue to my trust did I not raise my voice in behalf of one particular element exemplified in the life of Wm. McKinley. He was a plain man, with sympathy for all who were burdened or distressed. I question whether he ever harbored a spirit of revenge. A little scene enacted in January, 1895, when the members of his staff separated with him will serve to show this element of his character. At a farewell reception I recall having addressed him in these words: 'Man's life is sometimes compared to a book. I trust that your life's book will be a large octavo volume, bound in the purest gold, printed on clear, unsullied paper, with such type as will never blur, each page bringing you in daily contact with the wise and the good of this earth, never a line or a sentence causing you to exclaim, 'This heart knowing its own bitterness, its being grand, glorious, a summer's sun, as the setting of a summer's sun.'"

"When I had concluded, he approached each of us with outstretched hands and exclaimed: 'I trust there will be no time in my life when any position to which I may attain may make me more to any of you than plain Wm. McKinley.'"

"His place has already been taken in history. His history has already been written, and he wrote it himself. 'Let us weep in our darkness, 'But weep not for him—' 'Not for him who departing left millions in tears. 'Not for him who has climbed fame's ladder so high—' 'From the round at the top he stepped into the sky.'"

[These lines, so appropriate, were

Millinery Opening

I WISH TO ANNOUNCE and cordially invite all the ladies to attend my fall opening of Paris Hats and Bonnets, Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 24th and 25th. Open nights during opening.

Mrs. J. Mac Donald

130 South Howard Street
Successor to Wolf & Beck. OPEN EVENINGS

The CANDY SEASON

Is on and you will always find the best and purest

Home Made Candies

At Lowest Prices at

BECKER'S CAFE

122 S. Main st. Bell Phone 10713. People's Phone 312

DIMES GROW TO DOLLARS

If Deposited In

THE DIME SAVINGS BANK,

227 South Howard Street,

AKRON, OHIO.

We Pay 4 per Cent Interest on Savings Accounts.

MONEY TO LOAN IN SUMS FROM $5.00 TO $500

On Household Furniture, Pianos, Organs, Sewing Machines, Horses, Carriages, Watches, Diamonds, Life Insurance Policies and other securities.

All goods to remain in your possession without the least publicity. You can have loans for one or 12 months, weekly or monthly payments.

Loans Made the Same Day. Open Every Evening

AKRON SECURITY & LOAN CO., 193 S. Howard st

written by Nathaniel P. Willis on the death of President William Henry Harrison.

After the playing of "America" by the united band, with the chorus of school children assisting, the audience was dismissed by a benediction pronounced by Rev. James H. W. Blake, pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal church.

An Indication of Nervous Trouble.

A headache is simply an indication that some part of the body is deranged, usually the stomach or nervous system. Clinie Headache Wafers cure by relieving those conditions. Never fail. Try them and be convinced. 10 cents at all druggists. They are absolutely harmless. Don't accept a substitute.

JILTED HER,

And Also Escaped With Some Valuables of His Intended Wife.

Margaret Hubenthal, of 85 Oregon st., Cleveland, came here Saturday to be united in marriage with a man who gave his name as Geo. Forbes. The marriage did not take place and the man Forbes is missing. So also are $8 cash, a diamond ring and gold watch and chain, which it is alleged the cunning woman gave into the keeping of her unfaithful lover. To Lieutenant of Police Greenleaf, Saturday night the woman said she was now more concerned in recovering the valuables than she is over recovering the affections of the man who jilted her.

Geo. W. Lane, Pawama, Mich., "Your Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is the best remedy for indigestion and stomach trouble that I ever used. For years I suffered from dyspepsia, at times compelling me to stay in bed and causing me untold agony. I am completely cured by Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. In recommending it to friends who suffer from indigestion I always offer to pay for it if it fails. Thus far I have never paid."

Wm. Warner, Gem Pharmacy, 113 S. Howard st.

A most economical soap is....

Electric Grip

Grocers sell it, people use it.

MONEY TO LOAN —ON—

HOUSEHOLD GOODS

Pianos, Organs, Horses, Carriages, Wagons, Etc., Etc.

If you are in need of money for a grocery bill, meat bill, rent, taxes, or any other debt you owe, you can borrow the money and pay it back in small monthly payments. Property left in your possession and all business strictly confidential. Office hours from 9 to 11 a.m.; 1 to 5 p.m.; open from 7 to 8 in the evenings. Bell phone 790. People's 774.

L. C. MILLER

Room 14 Arcade Building.

Nelan Bros.

Just received another large shipment of

MASON JARS

HALF GALLONS,

QUARTS,

PINTS, all sizes.

Nelan Bros.

Leading Grocers

301-303 Mill st. Akron, O

Both phones, 374.

DR. KATE R. MCALLISTER

LADIES' PHYSICIAN. (Registered.)

Confidential advice and treatment of all diseases peculiar to women. Patients taken in confinement. Consultation free by mail. If in need of help write at once. Strictly private. A woman best understands women's needs. Medicine furnished at reasonable rates. Call or address Dr. Kate R. McAllister, cor. City Park and Stewart ave., Columbus, O.